“The Seeing Eye” was founded by two innovative Americans, Dorothy Harrison Eustis and Morris Frank. In the 1920s, Mrs Eustis was living in Switzerland breeding and training German Shepherds for (1) _____ work. It was during this time that she saw something astonishing in Germany. Dogs were being trained to become new eyes for veterans who had (2) _____ their sight in the First World War. Mrs Eustis was so impressed by the (3) _____ of these dogs and by the confidence of their blind owners that she wrote an article about her experience. It was published in the Saturday Evening Post (4) _____ the title: “The Seeing Eye”.

Millions read the article but the story could have ended right there if not for Morris Frank, a college (5) _____ and an insurance salesman from Nashville Tennessee. Blind since the age of (6) _____, Frank wrote to Mrs Eustis explaining that he would do anything for one of these dogs.

She invited him to her home in Switzerland where he became the (7) _____ blind American to regain his independence through the help of a dog guide. His success led to a bold (8) _____: an American School that would teach blind people how to achieve the same degree of independence as those with (9) _____ sight. The resulting partnership proved to be unstoppable. Mrs Eustis provided the funding and training while Mr Frank handled recruiting and (10) _____ relations. Within one year they had created a dog guide school they called “The Seeing Eye”.
